Harvest, Tora feast tonight

Jerusalem Post Staff
The festival of Shavuot (Weeks) begins this evening with a harvest festival, and also a revelation on which, according to tradition, the Torah was given to Moses on Mount Sinai.

celebrated the holiday yesterday — traditional flower-crowns on their heads.

In the kibbutzim, first-fruit pilgrimages will be held during the holiday to mark the harvest festival.

ALL-NIGHT VIGIL

It is an ancient custom to remain awake all night and pray the Shema prayer service at the crack of dawn. Many synagogues have organized lectures and study groups for the hours from midnight to dawn. Large crowds are expected at the Western Wall from three a.m. tomorrow.

Another, more widespread, custom is to eat cheese-cakes and other milk dishes on Shavuot. Our culinary expert, Molly Lyons Bar-David, provided several recipes for such dishes in yesterday's Jerusalem Post.

Shechem to get master plan for water

By YITZHAK OKED
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Municipality of Shechem (Nabbus) has been revamping its water systems and distribution network. The municipality commissioned Tahal (Water Planning for Israel) to draw up a master plan to meet the town's water requirements till the end of the present century. The plan has already been completed, and will be submitted soon.

It calls for new deep drillings in the area, in addition to the borehole drilled recently about six kms. east of the town.

Shechem has suffered in the past from severe water shortages, especially in dry years, necessitating bringing water from Tulkarm and other distant localities.

Another water supply plan soon to be completed by Tahal is geared for the village of Arava, south of the Dotan Valley, and for the refugee camp nearby.

Gaza's second jetty opened

Jerusalem Post Reporter

GAZA. — The second jetty of this city's port was dedicated yesterday by Transport Minister Shimon Peres.

Mr. Peres announced that work will soon begin on the port's breakwater, which will be built in two years, at a cost of IL25m. (Sources in Gaza told THE Jerusalem Post that the resulting harbour will provide anchorage for ships of up to 10,000 tons.)

The dedication of the 150-metre jetty, built at a cost of IL1.6m., was attended by the O.C. Central Command, Amir Rehavam Ze'evi; Gaza's Military Governor, Tst-Ahuf Avraham Ori; the Governor of the Bank of Israel, Moshe Sarbar, and the head of the Ports Authority, Aharon Remez.

SADAT CROSSES THE CANAL

CAIRO (Reuters). — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat crossed to the Eastern bank of the Suez Canal yesterday to inspect advanced Egyptian positions in Sinai.

Egypt still holds some positions on the Eastern bank of the Northern end of the Canal, which was taken by Israel during the Six Day War.

The President's visit, on the eve of the sixth anniversary of the war, is believed to be the first by an Egyptian President since then.

Eban: against East German entry to U.N.

MUNICH (AP). — Israel will vote against East German entry into the United Nations, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in an interview released here on Monday.

Israel "will not support East Germany's intention to become a member of the United Nations, even if we stand alone," Mr. Eban told the West German Illustrated weekly, "Quick." The interview will appear in tomorrow's issue of the magazine.

Mr. Eban noted East Germany's longstanding hostility to Israel, which he called "much more extreme than any other Socialist state in the Eastern bloc."

"We can prove at any time that former prominent Nazis are holding leading positions in East Germany," Mr. Eban added, and public life in the country "is being determined in part by Nazis."

Dayan absence from Brandt talks queried

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The first of an expected 90 German media representatives began arriving yesterday to cover the four-day visit of German Federal Chancellor Willy Brandt beginning Thursday.

Newspapers in Germany have been speculating on the significance of the omission from Chancellor Brandt's itinerary of a meeting with Defence Minister Dayan. The schedule includes meetings with Ministers Ailon, Eban, and Sapir, in addition to the Prime Minister. Seconded by the German press have attributed the omission to Israel "internal politics."

Mr. Dayan is understood to have turned down a German Embassy invitation to a gala dinner to be given by Mr. Brandt in Jerusalem on Saturday night, — reciprocating a dinner to be given him by the Premier Thursday night.

Mr. Brandt's programme was arranged by the German Embassy in consultation with the Prime Minister's Office, and every important detail was said to have been approved by Mrs. Meir.

Austria said preparing U.N. 242 timetable

CAIRO (Reuters). — The authoritative Egyptian newspaper "Al-Akram" said yesterday that Austria was preparing a draft resolution for the implementation of Security Council Resolution 242 on the Middle East according to a time table, with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim supervising every step.

Our Parliamentary Reporter adds: The N.R.P. Knesset faction last night called Foreign Minister Abba Eban, asking him to get the Council session postponed from tomorrow till after the Shavuot holiday (which is on Wednesday and Thursday evening).

(J.P. last night, Israeli delegate Yosef Tekohah, in the course of a procedural discussion with the current President of the Council, the Soviet delegate Jacob Malik, asked for a day's delay in opening the session.)

Gold shot up $5.75 an ounce in London to a record high of $128.50. In Zurich the metal was selling for $121.50, also a new high there. In Frankfurt the metal was fixed at $120.54 against Friday's close of $117.07.

So far, however, there has been no sign of the kind of monetary crisis that ended with devaluations of the U.S. dollar in December, 1971, and February, 1973. This is in part because since February the dollar has been floating against leading currencies outside fixed exchange rates. Governments are no longer forced to intervene in money markets to support their currencies and fend off devaluation threats.

A currency like the dollar can in theory keep floating down until it becomes cheap enough to attract bargain buyers and start climbing back up again.

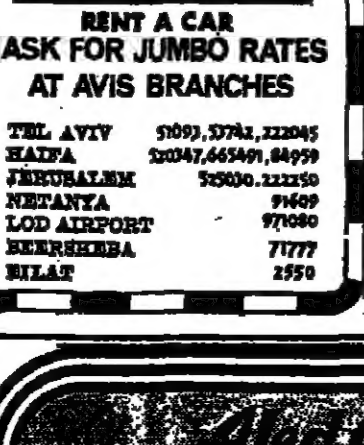

But in practice, economists are divided over how long the dollar should be allowed to sink before the government steps in.

South Africa yesterday announced a five per cent upward revaluation of the rand against the dollar. Finland also revalued the Finnmark against the dollar from 3.90 to 3.73.

U.S. 'will take fresh look at arms sales'

WASHINGTON (INA). — The State Department said yesterday that it has assured the Israeli government that "we will take a further look at Israel's views" on the sale of U.S. arms to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. It declined to give specific details of its discussion with Israeli representatives.

Israeli ambassador Simcha Dinits has met with Joseph Sisco, Assistant Secretary of State, and Dr. Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security advisor, on the U.S. sales of military equipment to the Arab states including Phantom planes.

A State Department spokesman said the sale of warships to Saudi Arabia is part of a bilateral programme initiated more than a year ago which will extend over the next 10 years. None of the 19 ships to be sold are of destroyer size, and most are smaller than frigates, he said. All will be new, he added.

The Grumman Tomcat

IAF may bid for Tomcat to succeed Phantoms

Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent
Israel has shown interest in purchasing the Grumman F-14 Tomcat multi-purpose fighter, according to a report in the latest edition of "Aviation Week." At this stage, the informed U.S. magazine reports, the talks have been unofficial, and have not been sanctioned by the American Defence Department.

According to "Aviation Week," Britain, Holland, West Germany, Italy and Iran have also shown interest in the two-seater plane, developed by Grumman for the U.S. Navy, and thought to be the answer to the Mig-25. The Tomcat, capable of speeds of up to Mach 2.4 at 40,000 feet, would replace the Phantom F-4 — currently Israel's most advanced plane — as the standard aircraft of the American Navy. The Tomcat, which is due to attain operational status later this year, is powered by two Pratt and Whitney 10,000 kilo turbofans and has swing-back wings for high speeds. The plane's armaments include a 20-mm. rotary cannon and eight Sparrow and Sidewinder missiles. The magazine reports that conservative estimates place the price of the aircraft at around $12m. In another report "Aviation Week" claims that Israel has purchased American television controlled Hove bombs, and is the first country outside America to possess the weapon.

Excited to see the sprinklers at work 2 FREED PILOTS AT HOME, 1 HAVING MEDICAL TESTS

Jerusalem Post Staff
The three Israel Air Force pilots released from Syrian captivity on Sunday underwent medical examinations at Sheba Hospital at Tel Hashomer yesterday. Mirage pilot Boaz Eitan was kept behind for further tests while Gideon Magen and Pinhas Nahmad returned home to their families.

Phantom crewman Magen, at his home in Kibbutz Ein Shemer, told THE Jerusalem Post: "We were certain the day of our release would come. We dreamed about it, we didn't know when it would happen, but we felt confident." The still excited pilot said yesterday evening, "Last night was the first time I slept a calm, peaceful sleep in the past three years," he added, "and it was truly exciting to wake up and look outside at the greenery, and see the sprinklers at work."

The only thing which still hurts, Magen said as his face shimmered for a moment, was the continued captivity of some of his colleagues in Egypt.

Pinhas Nahmad, of Yokneam, stayed home with his family during the day but in the evening he attended a big party thrown by the villagers at the community centre.

He was driven through the village at the head of a convoy of fully decorated cars, hooting loudly. Wild and enthusiastic cheers greeted his appearance at the hall. The merry-making included songs sung at his wedding and a special verse composed for the occasion.

Boaz Eitan, at Tel Hashomer, was not available for comment. His neighbours at Kibbutz Ein Viliin, however, said his return home was expected ever since the reports were heard of the Syrian officers' capture here then, of a disabled veteran by the name of Mickey, one of Boaz's friends related.

Simcha Holberg, father of the wounded, attended, and said he was donating a bottle of whiskey for Boaz's homecoming party — he even deposited the bottle, which we indeed drank last night, with one of the neighbours. Some of the boys even suggested we leave the tables and benches as they were, so we wouldn't have to do the work all over again so soon. However, Eitan's release did not come as soon as hoped for, and the tables had to be dismantled, and arranged again yesterday.

The men's future in the Air Force is uncertain. According to the Geneva Convention returned prisoners of war at a time of war, are not allowed to re-enter the hostilities.

Reuter news agency reported from Damascus that Syria yesterday alleged that the five Syrian officers released on Sunday, had been subjected to various types of ill-treatment and psychological and physical torture during their captivity.

An Israel Army unit captured the five officers inside Lebanese territory last June. The officers were released on Sunday together with 41 other Syrian prisoners and 10 Lebanese soldiers in exchange for the three pilots.

PLEA TO EGYPT

Foreign Minister Abba Eban last night called on Egypt to release its 10 Israeli prisoners in exchange for the 60 Egyptians in Israel captivity — to "prove the credibility of Cairo's readiness to seek a peaceful solution to the Middle East dispute."

Speaking at a Labour Party rally at the Ramat Yosef cinema in Bat Yam, Mr. Eban said that if Egypt's Foreign Minister really wanted peace, he would not be running to all the world's capitals, but "would come to us, because the world powers did not make our war nor will they bring about our peace."

'No need for action on Arab strike calls' on war anniversary

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

The military authorities in the administered territories yesterday held a series of consultations on the security situation in the wake of attempts by clandestine groups on the West Bank to stir unrest today, the sixth anniversary of the Six Day War.

Security circles were said to have concluded that the situation called for no special precautions or measures, except for the reinforcement of security patrols throughout the areas.

The Mayor of Hebron, Sheikh Mohammed Ali Ja'abari, yesterday criticized calls from neighbouring Arab states for a general strike on the West Bank. The sheikh said that, instead of striking on the June 5 anniversary, the West Bank population should hold a strike on the anniversary of the creation of the Arab League, the cause of the present grievances of the Arab people.

In Jerusalem yesterday, the Moslem Supreme Council issued a statement rejecting the continuation of Israel's control over the territories she took in the 1967 war. The council called on the Arab leaders to "shoulder their responsibilities."

Soviet-French probe into cause of Tupolev crash

PARIS. — An inquiry team yesterday probed for the cause of Sunday's Tupolev supersonic airliner crash here — while residents of the town struck by the disaster mourned its dead and demanded a change in site for future air shows.

French Defence Minister Robert Galley and Soviet Aviation Industry Minister Pyotr Dementyev met for more than two hours in Paris and set a joint commission to investigate the crash, which claimed at least 14 lives.

The investigation team — its exact composition was not disclosed — immediately went to the small town of Goussainville, where the airliner crashed after breaking up in mid-air during the Paris Air Show.

Flaming sections of the Tupolev-144, the first supersonic airliner to come to grief, scythed through the town, destroying houses, killing eight of the inhabitants and injuring 28 others. The other six victims were the Tupolev's crew.

Sorrow and anger in Goussainville fanned the controversy in France over whether air displays should be staged over inhabited areas.

The local mayor, told reporters he had protested before about the flights — "The people responsible for the disaster are those who permit the organisers to hold an air show in such conditions," he said.

Parts of the town 20 kilometres north of Paris, stood in a ruins as firemen raked through the rubble of houses in search of other possible victims.

World aircraft officials said yesterday that the crash of the Tupolev does not mean the end of the supersonic passenger age. Several officials said the needle-nosed plane broke into pieces apparently because of pilot failure and not because of any fault of the plane.

Henry Ziegler, president of Aerospaciale which manufactures in France the Anglo-British supersonic Concorde, said "its viability and security have been abundantly proved and the programme will not suffer from this incident."

Ziegler said Soviet Aviation Minister Pyotr V. Dementyev told him after the Tupolev crashed that "Russia will go on with its supersonic passenger programme."

Buses from areas to run lines into Israel

By YITZHAK OKED

TEL AVIV. — The Ministry of Transport has decided to allow local bus companies from the administered territories to run inter-urban lines to Israel and back.

The Ministry has already approved the inauguration of two lines, one a Tel Aviv-Netanya line to be run by a Tel Aviv bus company, and the second a Gaza-Jerusalem-Jordan line to be run by a Gaza company. The Ministry will also allow local bus companies from Samaria, Judea and Gaza to carry workers from the territories to Israel and back. Until now this Egged and Dan bus cooperatives have handled these workers.

The Government's decision came after a number of bodies in the West Bank and Gaza, including the Mayor of Nablus, had requested it. Representatives of the two bus cooperatives met yesterday with Deputy Minister of Transport Gad Ya'acobi to voice their protest. The deputy minister told them that the government's decision was just both morally and politically, proving that the "Green Line" (the pre-1948 War border line) does not exist any more. "This two-way flow of buses, Egged and Dan on one side and the local companies from the other side, will bring about open borders, mutual interests, and a strengthening of links," Mr. Ya'acobi said.

The representatives of Egged and Dan told the deputy minister that they were planning to appeal against the decision. An Egged spokesman told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that they would oppose having local bus companies elbowing into their lines in Israel.

Representatives of the two bus cooperatives are to meet with the Minister, Shimon Peres, this morning to voice their strong disapproval of his decision.

A Dan cooperative spokesman said the firm would warn the Minister that they would strike if he did not rescind his decision.

Probably under impact of the new move, the Egged Central Committee yesterday adopted a resolution agreeing to unite with the Dan bus cooperative, under special conditions — two of which are that old loans be liquidated and that the two cooperatives be partners in all of the main transportation projects that are now being planned.

Mr. Peres, who has been producing the two cooperatives to unite, had warned them that if they did not, he would let other companies into the public transport field.

Egged, the larger of the two cooperatives, has been reluctant up to now to go ahead with the unification.

'Brandt should stand openly on Israel's side'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt must understand that an "even-handed" policy toward Israel contradicts the expression of atonement by Germany for the annihilation of a third of the Jewish People, the Organization of Former Palestinian and Ghetto Fighters said here yesterday.

The organization, which consists of six groups of former ghetto fighters and Nazi victims, issued a statement on the eve of Mr. Brandt's visit here (he is scheduled to arrive on Thursday). The statement did not oppose the visit, but called on Mr. Brandt and his country to stand up openly and without hesitation on the side of Israel.

It charged that Germany of today is permitting neo-Nazi groups and newspapers to wage a campaign of hatred against Israel and the Jews.

The children of many perpetrators of genocide against the Jews, it said, now actively side with Arab terrorists in their schemes to destroy the Jewish State.

Under arrest for poisoning fish in kibbutz pond

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEBERIAS. — Two local fishermen suspected of poisoning thousands of fish in a pond belonging to Kibbutz Hamadia were remanded for 15 days by Magistrate Elias Kikly of Nazareth yesterday. A third suspect, who disappeared from the police called at his home to arrest him, has not yet been found.

The police charged that the two men, Yehuda Zivran, 31, and his brother Shimon, 27, had used poison to fish upstream in the Jordan, and that the poison flowed into Hamadia's pond, killing 250,000 young fish and 5,000 adult carp. The kibbutz estimates the damage at between IL60,000 and IL150,000. The settlers also suspect that the men deliberately introduced the poison into their pond water system to "get even" with them: the kibbutz allegedly informed on them when they used poison in the Jordan last week.

Tel Aviv bid to end strike of lifeguards

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The city yesterday filed an application for an injunction to force its striking lifeguards back to work.

The lifeguards are in effect asking for a 100 per cent wage rise. The Union of Municipal Employees has refused to support them in their struggle.

The lifeguards have been striking all week to back a long list of demands, among them no overtime, no overtime pay, and special emoluments for "exposing themselves to danger." The Municipal Employees Union has labeled these demands "unreasonable and exorbitant."

The city meanwhile warns that bathing is forbidden at all beaches at which lifeguards are not on duty.

Keel for new type of trawler laid in Haifa

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The keel for a newly designed 16.5-metre-long steel plate trawler was laid in the Kishon slipway of the Shagi Brothers company here yesterday.

Designed by the Fisheries Department, it will be the first of a series meant to rejuvenate the trawler fleet. The first steel trawler to be built in Israel for many years, it should be completed within a year.

The boat, which will be fitted with a 200 h.p. motor and refrigeration capacity for 10 tons of fish, was ordered by a company set up by four fishing school graduates. She is to cost IL400,000, IL100,000 less than the lowest offer by foreign yards.

AN ORDER FORBIDDING the carrying bringing cheap sardines from Gaza as long as local catches can meet their demand went into force over the signature of the Agriculture Minister yesterday. The order makes the purchase of Gaza sardines conditional on special Ministry permits.

THE GREEK PASSENGER liner Thaeta, formerly the Island Ship, made a day-long call in Haifa yesterday with 720 British tourists. The ship arrived from Beirut. Her agents, the Allalouf company, told The Jerusalem Post that her call was the first of a series of 10 fortnightly cruise visits.

The biggest coin ever minted in Israel is on display this month at the Israel Museum in Jerusalem. The bronze coin, which weighs 84 grams, depicts two eagles on one side (above) and the head of Zeus-Amon, the central god in the Ptolemy pantheon, on the other. The coin was minted in Acre during the reign of Philadelphos II in the third century B.C.E. Alongside this coin at the same exhibit is the smallest coin ever minted in Israel, an 0.1-gram silver coin minted in Gaza about 100 years before the bronze one.

U.K. airports won't display hijacker's book

By DAVID LENNON

LONDON. — Bookshelves at airports in Britain will not display Palestinian terrorist Leila Khaled's book, "My People Shall Live." Although they will stock the book, the newsagents, W.H. Smith, have agreed not to have it on open display at the airports.

This comes in response to a complaint by the British Airline Pilots Association that the book is "a hijacker's handbook."

Balpa claims the book would help people to learn how to hijack a civilian plane. The publishers, Hodder and Stoughton, deny that the book would help anyone planning a skyjack.

Having reviewed the book, I can only agree that all one would learn about hijacking from it is that all the airlines, with the exception of El Al, have failed to take even the most rudimentary steps to protect themselves against hijacking.

The book reveals nothing about the planning of the operation. The action in the air is restricted to a straight-forward brandishing of weapons in the hope of terrorizing the crew into compliance. When ordered, on an El Al plane, Miss Khaled had no contingency plan.

Arab, Israeli to address parley on terrorism

ROME (INA). — A symposium on "Terrorism and Political Crimes," which is scheduled to include papers by an Israeli and an Egyptian, began yesterday in the Sicilian city of Syracuse.

The symposium brings together 35 criminologists, jurists and magistrates from 20 countries.

The scheduled Israeli speaker is Prof. Yoram Dinstein of Tel Aviv, who was listed to speak next week on the theme of "Terrorism and Wars of Liberation" with reference to the Arab-Israeli conflict. He was scheduled to be followed by Egyptian Prof. Gamal el-Din, who will speak on the same subject.

Argentina blocks Arab bid to oust Israelis from meet

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The powerful Argentine Labour Confederation, the backbone of the Peronist party, has resisted a concerted Arab bid to expel the Histadrut delegation from its annual convention. This refusal caused seven Arab delegations to walk out of the convention, according to a message received at Histadrut head offices last night.

The Histadrut delegates are Amos Degani of the Histadrut Central Committee and the Histadrut representative in Latin America, Avraham Allon.

Riders injure tourist on beach

TEL AVIV.

Two teenagers from Bnei Brak were arrested yesterday on suspicion of riding wildly on horseback on the beaches of Tel Aviv on Saturday — and causing a fractured pelvis to a Swedish tourist who was kicked by one of the horses.

The tourist, Steve Carlson, was walking along the Hilton Hotel's beach when he was suddenly kicked from behind. He says he turned and saw two rampaging horses pass by. He gave the description of the horses and their riders to the police, who combed through numerous riding stables in the area until they located the horses at a stable in Bnei Brak.

Haim Halperin buried in T.A.

TEL AVIV. — Scientists and farmers mingled at the Kiryat Shani cemetery here yesterday to pay their last respects to Professor Haim Halperin — a pioneer in the development of this country's agriculture — who died Saturday at the age of 77.

As the coffin lay in state at the Agricultural Centre here — which Halperin helped found — he was eulogized by Minister without Portfolio Yisrael Galili and by Avraham Bartfeld, his colleague for many years. Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon delivered the eulogy at the graveside.

Solel Boneh-Shikun Ordim pl Rental flats for newlyweds being bu

By MACABEE DEAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — A plan to build small apartments for newlyweds and rent them for IL250 a month has been launched by Rental Housing, a new company set up jointly by Solel Boneh and Shikun Ordim.

The first 128 apartments, in Kiryat Shareit (Holon), will be ready for occupancy within 18 months, Arye Oron, director-general of Rental Housing, said yesterday.

Under the scheme, newlyweds will register for the apartments at the local municipality and will be selected by a committee composed of representatives of the company, the Ministry of Housing, a Municipality.

The 60-square-metre flat have 2½ rooms. The monthly rent will be pegged to the Living Index, so there will be slight rise in rent each year. In addition, each couple will pay for a deposit of between IL6,000. This is about 10 per cent of the cost of the apartment, the sum, plus interest, will be turned to the couple at the five years, when they will vacate the flat for another couple. (The couple can leave the five years are up, wish.)

Mr. Oron stressed that rental was made possible Government and Histadrut support.

After being occupied for 1 the flats will be refurbished put up for sale.

In all, some 1,600 such flats planned. At present, project the planning or development in Tel Gileborim, Holon (8 Rehov Netzev Chen, Neve S Hafia (176); Petah Tikva Kfar Saba (48); Jerusalem Ashkelon (64); Beersheba Kiryat Gat (64) and Migam (48).

Labour-Liberal coalition urged

Jerusalem Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The chairman of the Labour Party's younger leadership circle has urged the party to abandon its traditional coalition with the National Religious Party in favour of one with the Liberal Party (now part of the Gahal bloc with Herut).

Michael Harish, head of the Lashuv group, said the Liberals were ripe for an association with Labour because of intensifying differences with Herut on such issues as religion and state, electoral reform and foreign policy.

Party Secretary-General Aharon Yadin told the Lashuv group at the same meeting that he hoped the three former parties that merged into Labour (Rafi, Mapai and Ahdut HaAvoda) would "fade away" after the coming elections. He said the ideological differences between the three constituents were no longer valid.

IL 40,000 in diamonds stolen

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Diamonds estimated at IL40,000 were stolen yesterday morning from a woman employed by a local diamond merchant, while she was taking the diamonds to the Exchange.

Bahel Greenfeld, 29, was carrying the diamonds inside an attaché case, in the vicinity of the Diamond Exchange, when a young man coming toward her suddenly snatched her case and ran to the corner, where an accomplice was waiting for him on a motorcycle.

Police are now searching for the two youths on the basis of descriptions given by the victim and other eye-witnesses.

Youths break up home of J'lem 'missionaries'

Jerusalem Post Reporter

An American couple in Jerusalem told The Jerusalem Post late last night that "20 to 30" youngsters "wrecked our apartment, believing we were missionaries."

Mrs. C.W. Jacquith said the youngsters took away the telephone and house key and several books, including Bibles, from the Rehov Hess flat. She believed a report in a Hebrew newspaper had recently referred to herself and her husband as missionaries. "We are Bible lovers," she said. "We often have students around, but we don't engage in missionary work."

Her husband, a retired physician, had left to report to the police, she reported. The couple has resided in Israel for three years.

On Sunday night a service at a Christian mission house in Jerusalem's Rehov Hanev'im was disrupted by three members of the Anti-Mission League, who almost came to blows with the worshippers.

Police were called to evict the intruders, but no arrests were made. The incident followed a press conference earlier in the day at which League spokesmen accused missionaries of financing the emigration to Canada of three immigrant families from the Soviet Union.

CONTRACTOR CHARGES: IL 1,000m. wasted every year due to lack of materials

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — About a billion pounds are wasted each year in the building industry due to the failure of contractors to obtain a steady supply of building materials, David Stern, president of the Federation of Contractors and Builders, said yesterday. He was speaking to newsmen about the programme of the forthcoming three-day national conference of the Federation, which will open at the Shalom Hotel in Jerusalem on June 12 and last through June 14.

One of the main themes of the conference's 160 delegates will be setting up a company, or a series of companies, to produce and supply the contractors with needed raw materials, thus ensuring a continuous supply, leading to better-quality materials and less loss of work days. Mr. Stern said: "When you have a steady and definite supply of raw materials, you can afford the luxury of checking for quality. When you don't, you grab the first raw materials which come along."

As for the future price of apartments, it was noted that there didn't seem any likelihood that they would fall. Labour prices are rising, so is the cost of raw materials, and the price of land is "reaching astronomical figures." It was stated that the cost of land constitutes 65 per cent of the price of an apartment in Tel Aviv — and that Tel Aviv has a higher cost-of-land/cost-of-flat ratio than any other city in the world, including New York.

Other subjects to be discussed are setting up a company which will buy small parcels of land, unite them, and facilitate the construction of large projects.

The State Lands Administration will also be called upon to supply private contractors with land at reasonable prices.

Magen David Adom will function as usual, and all doctors working in outlying villages will remain at their posts.

Journalists score use of 'black labour'

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER

THE AVIV. — The general meeting of the Tel Aviv Journalists Association has condemned the Polish-language "Tribuna" and the Russian-language "Yevreyskaya Pravda," as well as the two Hebrew economic dailies — "Shavar" and "Yom Yom" — for employing unorganized newsmen. It especially took the two foreign-language papers to task for exploiting immigrant journalists.

Defence researchers make grievances public

REHOVOT. — The defence establishment's researchers, who declared a labour dispute last week, made public their grievances this week — the first time they have ever aired their labour problems publicly.

In an "open letter," the researchers drew comparisons between their wage conditions and those of their colleagues in research institutions and universities. They included a table showing a gap of IL1,100 between the monthly salary and benefits of a senior researcher in the Technion or the Weizmann Institute and that of a researcher on the same level in the defence establishment.

The Ben-Yehuda mall — as it may look someday. This is a Jerusalem Post article's impression as published on the cover of the Weekend Magazine of July 7, 1972, when the plan was first revealed.

Trial of Ben-Yehuda mall idea next week

By AARON SITTNER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Fake palm trees on the sidewalks, bananas and flowers hanging from the lampposts, beach chairs and plastic fountains in the roadway — these are some of the trimming passersby will see in Jerusalem's Rehov Ben-Yehuda some time next week, as municipal planners stage a one-day trial of the contemplated conversion of the busy thoroughfare into a pedestrian mall.

If the de-motorizing experiment is a success, a second trial — this one lasting three to six months — will be held in September. If this trial fails, the whole idea of a carless shopping mall may be dropped.

The proposal is part of the Jerusalem Transportation Master Plan, formulated over a year ago by the Municipality-Transport Ministry team headed by David Margolis. At a meeting with Mr. Margolis on Sunday night, the Rehov Ben-Yehuda Merchants Association guardedly approved the two trials, but demanded certain guarantees before the plan is made a reality.

Sapir gets Boys Town award for education

By JUDY SIEGEL
Special to The Jerusalem Post

A beaming skull-capped Finance Minister received the 1973 Boys Town Education Award yesterday afternoon "for his outstanding contribution to the growth and advancement of education in Israel."

In a ceremony held facing Chama Lerner's Mishma murels in the large dining hall of the Jerusalem school, and interspersed with melodies sung by the school choir, Mr. Sapir received a silver medal and parchment scroll.

Mr. Sapir, the American banker, philanthropist and president of Boys Town, thanked the Finance Minister for his "sacred formula of math-nation funds" that has provided large sums for the expansion of the 22-year-old vocational and academic institution. "It has triggered a tremendous flow of giving from Jews all over the world to Israel and has given new impetus to the growth and development of vital services."

Motions demand debate on 'business scandal in Treasury'

JERUSALEM POST KNESSET REPORTER

Knesset Member Eliezer Shostak (Free Centre) has charged that one of Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir's former senior advisers feathered his nest in the hotel business, while he was a civil servant. Mr. Shostak has urged for an urgent debate; but the President, which has not yet considered his request, will probably not grant it urgency. The issue is likely to be debated in the ordinary way in a week or two. Similar motions were also tabled by the State List and by Gideon Palti of Gahal.

Mr. Shostak said adviser Eli Sela, who was a Treasury consultant in the Tourism Ministry before he became Mr. Sapir's adviser, tried to use the powers of approving loans to hotel entrepreneurs to wheedle a 50 per cent share in the planned hotel, plus a monthly salary from the hotel investor.

The deal never came off, Mr. Shostak said; but, before that, Mr. Sela offered the entrepreneur the deal with the commitment that he would get all the capital in the form of loans, and would not have to invest a penny of his own money.

Mr. Shostak said the affair proved that it was possible in Israel to set up a business with 100 per cent public money, and without any public supervision of the loan or investment procedures.

The Finance Minister yesterday denied Mr. Sela misused his position in any way while employed in his Ministry. The police investigation has already revealed that whatever wrong was done, if any, was not done during the time Sela worked there, he said. He was answering questions from High School students at Jerusalem's Beit Agon.

"It's a matter for the police, and they will decide whether to press charges," he added. "But I will have nothing to do with me."

JUDGE SHIMON BAZI, a Haifa Magistrate and Registrar of the District Court, retired yesterday after 45 years of work in the courts. Magistrate's Court Judge Avraham Herman has been appointed to take his place.

Lord Shinwell: Britain's pro-Arab policy should not worry Israel

By YAA'OOV FRIEDLER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Israel should not worry itself too much about the pro-Arab attitude of the British Government, according to Lord "Manny" Shinwell, the British Opposition's chief spokesman. "What the Government does through the Foreign Office and Sir Alec Douglas-Home is of little consequence. The Government doesn't have much influence."

Lord Shinwell, who is here for a fortnight's visit, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that present British policy vis-a-vis Israel "is shabby. It is also peculiar and difficult to understand, except that the Foreign Office, for as long as I can remember (and that's 70 years) has always been more or less pro-Arab."

ILP to see Goren on mamzer issue

JERUSALEM POST KNESSET REPORTER

An Independent Liberal Party delegation will call on Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren this morning to ask for a progress report on his promise to ease the plight of (especially non-mamzer) Jews prevented from leading normal family lives in this country because of halachic discrimination.

The ILP shelved its parliamentary initiative to permit civil marriage for halachic outcasts about six months ago, after a major Coalition rumour and a promise by the Chief Rabbi to try and ease the lot of the people involved.

The list is intended to include all the left-wing organizations — including Ha'olam Hazeh — "except Ratzah and Matzpen." Negotiations between the various groups have been under way for some time, and a meeting for discussing the list's proposed platform is to be held soon, Maki officials said.

Kavalek retains his chess lead

By ELLIARU SHARAF
Jerusalem Post Chess Correspondent

NETANYA. — International Grandmaster Lubomir Kavalek of the U.S. retained the sole leadership of the international chess tournament here on Sunday, beating his countryman, International Master Anthony Sady, in the seventh round.

I.G.M. Sammy Reshevsky of the U.S. became the sole runner-up of the event (following his victory over ill-rated Meir Rom), with only half a point separating him from the leader. Yair Kraidman retained his leading position, tying with I.G.M. Luděk Pachman for the third place, both of them having drawn their two last games. Cernich and Porat improved their results a little, the first by beating Peretz and the latter by beating Israeli's Heider Camara.

Results of Round 6: Cernich beat Peretz, Domnitz beat Kaldor, Domjanovic beat Tatal, Sady beat Rom, Porat beat Camara, Friedman drew with Kraidman, Pachman drew with Kavalek, Reshevsky drew with Yanofsky.

Results of Round 7: Yanofsky beat Camara, Reshevsky beat Rom, Kavalek beat Sady, Kraidman drew with Pachman, Friedman drew with Tatal. The games Porat — Peretz, Domnitz — Domjanovic and Cernich — Kaldor were adjourned.

Overall standings after the seventh round: Kavalek 6 points; Reshevsky 5½; Yanofsky, Tatal and Pachman 5 points each; Sady 4½; Domjanovic 4½; Yanofsky, Tatal and Friedman 3½; Domnitz 3½; Cernich, Kaldor and Porat 3½; Camara 2; Porat 1½; Rom nil.

Soos, West Germany; P. Ostio, Yugoslavia; M. Onat, Turkey; R. Cardoso, Philippines. Israeli players in the event include National Masters Leon Leberman and Yitzhak Radachkovich, both newcomers from the Soviet Union, who are favorites for one of the top places. After the second round, Jacobson, N. Birnbaum and Plastesky were in the lead with two points each.

Technion strikers told to go back to work

Jerusalem Post Staff

The 500 Technion assistants and instructors, who have been striking for the past three weeks over wage demands, were instructed by their staff chairman to return to work yesterday, just as the Technion administration obtained a court injunction to that effect.

Meanwhile, the Education Ministry yesterday vetoed a tentative wage agreement reached between Tel Aviv University and its academic staff.

The Haifa District Labour Court issued a temporary injunction ordering the Technion strikers back to work, and forbidding the rest of the academic staff from joining them, as they intended to do immediately after Shavuot. Before the court order was delivered, however, after negotiations with management, the senior staff held a general meeting at which they supported the assistants' and instructors' demands, but asked them to stop their strike.

The strikers were asked to accept the terms of an agreement they had rejected, which provides for the payment of two IL720 stipends for 1972/73, with the management's promise to have the grants made part of their pay.

Faculty Association chairman Prof. Azriel Eviatar said he would call on the assistants to resume teaching this morning, in the light of the decision.

Tel Aviv University, meanwhile, was forbidden by the Education Ministry to sign a similar agreement reached with its assistants and instructors. The Ministry argued that the benefits which the staff stood to gain would spark a round of demands from the staff of other universities.

The university and the academic staff agreed the assistants would get a stipend in place of the demanded salary rise, and that a parity committee would look into the demands of the senior lecturers.

Abu Rodeis workers' dispute settled

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The labour dispute at the Abu Rodeis oil field was settled yesterday at a special Histadrut Central Committee meeting, when the workers committee and the management agreed to reopen talks together with a Histadrut trade union mediator.

The government yesterday issued job mobilization orders against some key workers at the Sinal oil field after they started sanctions paralysing the oil well operation to back wage demands.

The Histadrut and Netivei Netz director Meir Giron agreed to ask the Finance Minister to cancel the mobilization orders.

Vietnam violations increasing

SAIGON (Reuters). — Communist

violations of the Vietnam cease-fire have increased significantly since Canada's decision to withdraw from the international commission observing the cease-fire, military sources said here yesterday.

The South Vietnamese military command reported that in the 24 hours to dawn yesterday there were 93 Communist violations — an increase of nearly 20 incidents on the daily average for one week ago.

In Paris yesterday American and North Vietnamese officials met for 5½ hours of talks to lay the groundwork for new high-level negotiations on the Vietnam cease-fire.

U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State William H. Sullivan and Hanoi's Deputy Foreign Minister, Nguyen Co Thach, consulted at an American villa in the Vesinet suburb.

No Moscow permit for Solzhenitsyn

MOSCOW (Reuters). — Soviet authorities have so far refused to grant novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn a residence permit allowing him to live in Moscow with the wife he married over six weeks ago, informed sources said Sunday.

A permit to live in the Soviet capital and other major cities is not an automatic right, but normally one sure way to obtain one is to marry a Moscow resident, as Solzhenitsyn did in April.

After obtaining a divorce from his first wife, Natalya Reshetovskaya, the Nobel Prize-winning author married Natalya Svetlova, the mother of his two young sons, in civil and church ceremonies.

Svetlova, a scientist, already has a Moscow permit.

Reportedly upset by the authorities' failure to grant his request, Solzhenitsyn is now living with his family in a dacha (country cottage) near Moscow for the summer, but it is only a temporary residence.

Cypriots turn out for Makarios

PAFOS (AP). — The people of Paphos voted overwhelmingly for Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios Sunday, despite nearly 50 bomb and shooting incidents launched by the anti-Makarios EOKA underground of General George Grivas to deter them from voting.

The flames of violence, sparked off by the election of a new bishop for this westernmost island district, left one Greek Cypriot dead and two others — one a policeman — wounded.

Police said the barrage of explosions and gunfire were caused by the masked armed men of EOKA, who vowed to intimidate voters. EOKA leaflets scattered throughout the town and district simultaneously with the first explosions Saturday night called on the people of Paphos to boycott the election. "To prove to Makarios that Paphos will be the grave of his ambitions."

Official results from 76 out of the total 87 polling stations indicated, however, that 87 per cent of the electorate had ignored the EOKA threats. They cast their votes for the sole candidate, Bishop Suftragan Chrysostomos of Constantia, Makarios' closest aide.

In several of the small vine-growing mountain villages, voting was 100 per cent, a turnout reflecting the fact that both Makarios and the Bishop Suftragan are native sons of Paphos.

THE EDUCATION MINISTRY has agreed to introduce Cretan language instruction in schools in the Cretan villages of Kama and Kithayia in Galilee. An American expert will arrive shortly to train the teachers.

Tennis stars to miss local championship

By JACK LEON

Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Israel's two young Davis Cup players, Yair Wertheimer and Ronny Lerner, are to compete in an international tennis tournament in Amsterdam this weekend, which forces them to miss the 1973 National Tennis Championships in Haifa.

The pair leave for Holland on Thursday. Wertheimer and Lerner were seeded third and fourth respectively in the men's singles of the Nationals, which begin at 3 p.m. today at the Carmel Country Club and continue until Saturday. (Top seeds are defending champion Yehoshua Shalem and local No. 2 Yosef Stathols).

The whole cost of the youngsters' one-week trip is being borne by the organizers of the Amsterdam meet, the invitation having been extended through the Israel Lawn Tennis Association as a result of contacts made at last month's Davis Cup match here between Israel and the Netherlands. The I.L.T.A. decided it could not pass up this opportunity for much-needed international competition for the country's top two young players, and reluctantly agreed to their withdrawing from the Nationals.

Athens bans news of King's appeal

ATHENS (UPI). — The newly-formed Greek republic yesterday banned any mention in the press of exiled King Constantine's appeal for an impartial referendum on the abolished monarchy, even though Greeks with short-wave radio receivers could pick up the speech as it was broadcast from Rome on Sunday.

Political observers said the ban tarnished the credibility of the government's pledge that the new republic would lead to a return of "Western-type" democracy. "The man in the street does not believe that provisional President George Papadopoulos is really republican, or that he believes in democracy," the editorial writer for the Athens daily "Vima" said.

Political sources said the arrests of several leading royalists shortly after Mr. Papadopoulos proclaimed the republic on Friday and appointed himself provisional president also contributed to the skepticism in public, academic and administrative quarters. Among the arrested, they said, was 49-year-old Christoforos Statos, a former cabinet minister and one of the country's leading industrialists.

Rabin keeps out of debate on Six Day War

By SARAH HONIG

Jerusalem Post Reporter

RAMAT GAN. — Ex-chief of staff Yitzhak Rabin declared yesterday, eve of the sixth anniversary of the Six Day War, that he refuses to take part in the debate recently instigated by the Labour party weekly "Or" about the role of Defence Minister Moshe Dayan in the 1967 victory.

Mr. Rabin was speaking before an audience of students at a question-and-answer session at Bar Ilan University here.

Mr. Rabin said that, having experienced the responsibility, tensions and dangers six years ago, he has "no intention of getting involved in the wars of the Jews. This I am quite ready to leave to 'Or' and others." "Or" recently published an attack against Mr. Dayan's supporters alleging that they deliberately created panic and hysteria in the pre-war days so as to win him the defence portfolio. Such "wars of the Jews," according to Mr. Rabin, exploit public knowledge "to cook up calumnies. Anyone who takes responsibility at the time that many people contributed to victory, including Moshe."

Commenting on the state of Israel's foreign relations, Mr. Rabin said that "our political position in the world is not determined by statements issued by the nations nor by U.N. resolutions though these tend to be an indication of the fact that when it comes to our relations with outside things have never been so good as in the last 4,000 years."

He explained that Israel's danger of active Soviet intervention in the conflict has moved, that an imposed armistice more remote than ever and rescue of Jews in distress the first time become an actual issue of the first rank.

"Where there are Senators like Jackson in the 1930s who have risen up and called for Roosevelt not to bar Jews from the country, there have been Holocaust survivors," Rabin asserted.

Med. pollution parley in Beirut

BEIRUT. — A French environmental expert warned yesterday that, even after the problem of oil pollution of the sea has been solved, the prospect of nuclear propulsion for ships presents new dangers of pollution.

Andre Chaudieres, a town planning specialist and delegate of the United Nations Organization, was addressing the first World Intercommunal Conference for the Protection of the Mediterranean against Pollution, which opened here yesterday.

After welcoming speeches by Lebanese government and Beirut municipality officials, Kuwait Education Minister Jassem Khaleel al Marzook injected a political note by accusing Israel of "pollution worse than that of sea and air because it chased a whole people from their land."

Chagall returns to his native Russia

MOSCOW (Reuters). — Exiled modernist painter Marc Chagall set foot on his native Russian soil yesterday for the first time in more than 50 years to be welcomed by a small but enthusiastic group of officials and admirers.

The 85-year-old Jewish artist arrived from Paris at the invitation of the Soviet Ministry of Culture to attend the first full-scale exhibition of his paintings since before Stalin.

Born in the Byelorussian town of Vitebsk, Chagall, one of the pioneers of 20th Century art, will also visit Leningrad and, perhaps some other towns during his two-week stay, Soviet officials said.

But he had asked not to visit Vitebsk itself, because he did not want to be "reminded of the past," they added. Asked why he did not want to return to his birthplace, Chagall only smiled and pointed at his heart.

His memories of Vitebsk were a recurrent theme in his painting, even many years before he left the Soviet Union.

His paintings were banned here for many years but the exhibition, which opens here today, is said to contain several paintings and over 60 lithographs.

MARC CHAGALL

Since he left the Soviet Union in 1922, the painter has spent his life in France, but worked and lived in the Soviet Union in recent years, official biographies have softened to gall and other rebel Russian artists of his generation, Kandinsky and Malevich.

The thaw which led to invitation started in the works by him were removed from Soviet vaults and sent abroad.

Watergate inquiry all girls hired to play on Democrats

ON — Former Attorney General Mitchell has told legislators that all girls hired to play on Democrats in the 1972 election were recruited by the Watergate burglars. Mitchell, who was a member of the 1972 Democratic National Convention, said the girls were hired to sing and play piano at Democratic rallies. He said the girls were hired by a man who was later identified as a Watergate burglar. Mitchell said the girls were hired to sing and play piano at Democratic rallies. Russian robot ends lunar exploration

MOSCOW (UPI). — The Lunokhod 2 moon robot has ended its exploration after four and one-half months on the lunar surface, the Tass News Agency said yesterday. The eight-wheeled robot covered 37 km. three and one-half times the distance logged by its predecessor, the original Lunokhod, during 10 months in 1970-1971. Lunokhod 2 was guided by laser direction-finding for the first time and determined that the magnetic field of the moon's surface is variable. The craft explored during five lunar days. It was delivered to the moon's surface in January by the Luna 21 mothership. Tass said the robot discovered that the moon is shrouded in a strata of dust particles, strongly dispersing visible solar light. It regularly measured and chemically analyzed the physical and mechanical properties of the upper layer of lunar rock during its travels. "The research yielded vast data on different formations on the lunar surface," Tass said.

Syria plans to close air to Lebanon

JERUSALEM Post Arab Affairs Reporter — Syria is planning to close its airspace to Lebanon, according to indications from Damascus last night. Lebanese Foreign Minister Khalil Abu Hamad said in Beirut that there had been no official information from Damascus on what he termed the Syrians' "grave" intention to close their airspace. He added that Lebanese air traffic over Syria yesterday continued as usual. Some Beirut newspapers yesterday said the Syrians were trying to set up an air blockade of Lebanon when Syria sealed its borders on May 8, at the height of clashes between the Lebanese army and the Palestinian terrorists. Syria's reported intention to close its airspace with Lebanon coincided with renewed terrorist charges that the Lebanese army was reinforcing its troops near refugee concentrations. In a broadcast from Cairo, the terrorists said that the Lebanese army was "escalating its provocations" against Palestinian civilians residing in Lebanon. Meanwhile, Lebanese and terrorist representatives yesterday held a joint meeting in Beirut under Premier Amal al-Hafez to discuss the progress of their co-existence agreement. Beirut Radio last night quoted Hafez as saying that understanding between the two sides was "getting better" and giving assurances that normalcy was being restored to the battle-scarred Lebanese capital.

Libyan radio broadcasts Nasser's voice

BEIRUT (UPI). — Libya's state-run radio, taken over by a Revolutionary Popular Committee on Sunday, is presenting a programme of martial music and old speeches by late Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Radio propaganda is also advocating:

- Suspension of all secular laws.
- Distribution of weapons to the people.
- Furling those who are politically sick.
- An administrative revolution and the trampling of bureaucrats under the people's feet.
- A cultural revolution and the destruction of books expounding foreign ideologies.

In addition to the radio and television, the Committee has taken over the Libyan News Agency and re-named it "The Agency of the Arab Revolution," Tripoli radio said. Libyan officials said more than 850 popular committees have been formed all over the country to take over the running of administrative offices in accordance with Gaddafi's orders.

Joint portrait of earth and moon

PASADENA, California (UPI). — The earth and its moon will sit for their first joint portrait this year, according to a Mariner project space scientist. As the Mariner 10 space probe speeds on its way towards examinations of Venus and Mars, it will look back and capture pictures of both earth and moon, the first photos of the planet with its satellite taken from a distance. Plans for the pictures were made public on Sunday by Eugene Giberson, project manager for Mariner 10 at the California Institute of Technology jet propulsion laboratory which will monitor the mission after launching. Mariner 10 is scheduled to be launched in November. The earth-moon pictures will be broadcast back to earth when the spacecraft is about 400,000 kms. from earth and 150,000 kms. from the moon, Mr. Giberson said.

IN THE KNESSET Bill to cut cigarette ads voted to c'ttee

JERUSALEM Post Knesset Reporter — Cigarette and tobacco advertising will be severely restricted under a bill which the Knesset yesterday voted unanimously to committee on the first reading. The Law for the Limitation of Advertising on Smoking Materials, as it is called, will ban all advertising on radio and television, as well as in any public place, such as on billboards. However, a tobacco manufacturer or dealer may carry his name and trademarks on his place of business. Newspaper advertising will have to obey certain restrictive rules, under the law, one of which will be to add the warning in the ad, in bold letters, that smoking is harmful to health. Packets of cigarettes, tobacco and other smoking products will have to carry the same warning, in Hebrew and one other language common in Israel. The distribution of tobacco goods, ashtrays, lighters and so forth, for publicity purposes, will be banned. Advertisers will have six months to take their advertising down. Introducing the bill, Health Minister Victor Shalom said the anti-smoking campaign in this country had already reduced the number of adult smokers by 7 per cent in three years. Restrictions on ads would accelerate this fall, he believed, if coupled with educational measures. Country after country was legislating against tobacco advertising, he added.

House debate next week on Soviet Jewry

The Knesset will hold a plenum debate next week on the plight of the Jews of Soviet Russia, Syria and Iraq. This is in accordance with the vote a fortnight ago on a Gahal motion for the agenda presented by Gahal chief Menahem Begin. Mr. Begin said, at the time, that he wanted the debate on the eve of the Brezhnev-Nixon summit, so that the Jews of the U.S. could give timely vent to their anger at the Soviet persecutions. The debate will precede the June 16-18 summit by a few days. The timing of the debate provoked a storm at the opening of yesterday's session, when Shmuel Tamir (Free Centre) demanded that the debate be held this week, well before the Brezhnev visit. Speaker Eliezer Yeshayahu lost his temper when he refused to allow Tamir a point of order, and the result was a shouting match.

Gahal bills to abolish taxes

Gahal's Shmuel Erlich has tabled a private member's bill to abolish Government property tax on dwellings. In his bill, Mr. Erlich suggests that the Seventh Knesset pass the measure before it rises next month, so that no property tax be levied, as of next April. The tax is both ineffective and unfair, he said. The State Revenues Administrator favours its cancellation, he noted. Gahal's Gideon Palt has tabled a motion for the agenda, calling for the abolition of travel tax. Some are exempt, while for others, the tax is a heavy burden, he said. The tax is solely imposed in order to swell Treasury revenues, he said, and it has never reduced overseas travel. Elsewhere in Jerusalem yesterday, Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir confirmed the view that the travel tax did not stop Israelis from travelling abroad, but quoted figures to show that the tax was necessary as a source of revenue. He told an audience of high school pupils that the number of citizens travelling abroad has been increasing — 35,000 travelled in the first quarter of 1973, compared to 30,000 in the same period last year. He added: "My own two grandchildren, also high school students, plan to travel this year, and I promised to help them pay their travel tax if they pass their exams smoothly."

Regular soldiers upset about pay

Regular Army non-coms and officers in the I.D.F. and their families, have been complaining recently — according to Knesset Member Yehuda Ben-Meir (N.R.P.) — that their wage-scales this year are lagging behind wages in the civilian sector. Dr. Ben-Meir put a parliamentary question on this topic to Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. He wrote in his question that the delay in the payment of the wage increments for 1973 was bad for morale.

U.S. returnee PoW takes own life

HARRISON, New York (Reuter). — A U.S. Air Force captain, freed from a North Vietnamese prison camp in February after spending more than seven years in captivity was found dead on Sunday with a plastic bag over his head. Police declined to say Captain Alan Budno had committed suicide but said he had left several letters. The captain, who would have been 33 yesterday, was found in bed while staying at the home of his wife's parents here. He became one of the longest-held U.S. prisoners of war in Vietnam after his Phantom jet was shot down over the north in October 1965. His death came only two days after Dr. Richard Wilbur, a senior medical officer at the Pentagon, warned that returning prisoners of war would be susceptible to a high rate of psychological trouble, leading to suicides, murders and accidental deaths.

NAZI GUARD GETS LIFE

BERLIN. — A West Berlin court sentenced a former SS guard to life imprisonment yesterday for his part in the murder in 1943 of a concentration camp inmate his dogs nearly mangled to death. Karl-Heinz Diggel, 65, an old-age pensioner, shot dead the prisoner in Cracow-Plaszow, Poland, with camp commander Anton Goeth watching and laughing, evidence showed. Diggel, arrested in late 1971, said he shot the mangled prisoner only "because I could no longer watch his pains caused by the dogs." Witnesses from Israel, Poland and the U.S. testified that Diggel urged the dogs at the prisoner time and again before shooting the injured man. In New York, Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Nazi War Crimes Centre in Vienna called on Sunday night for the continuation of trials against Nazis who have so far escaped punishment not only for legal reasons but also to educate mankind. "They must take place to make people understand how far down hate can take us when hate is part of a government programme," said Mr. Wiesenthal who received an honorary doctorate at the New York school of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion. The homicidal GI worries the Pentagon

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — The Pentagon is concerned because too many U.S. servicemen are killing each other — or themselves — while out of the firing line. The alarming mortality rate — 10,000 men died in Southeast Asia from homicide, suicide, accidents and other causes, including drugs — has prompted a Defence Department move to curb such losses, a senator disclosed yesterday. Democrat Senator Robert Byrd made public a letter he has received from the Pentagon which states there is serious concern over such deaths — particularly those caused by fraying (assault by throwing fragmentation or anti-personnel bombs) and of "accidental homicide." The Pentagon letter describes these and other types of violent death as "a phenomena" of the Vietnam war, and adds that these were greatly reduced with the U.S. troops withdrawal. In his letter to Senator Byrd, the Deputy Assistant Defence Secretary, Lieutenant General Leo Benade, said he was satisfied the Pentagon had "fully recognized the seriousness of the non-hostile mortality rate and has taken significant steps to reduce those rates, not only in Southeast Asia but throughout the world." The defence chief said non-hostile deaths totalled 10,303 up to the end of last March. Of these 978 were cases of "accidental homicide," 190 murders, 793 "accidental self-destruction" and 379 suicides. "Other accidents" resulted in the deaths of 1,420. At least 102 drug abuse deaths were recorded up to the end of last August. The letter said that "fraying" declined dramatically from a peak of 37 deaths in 1969 to three last year. Noting that Senator Byrd had expressed concern over the state of discipline in the armed forces, the Pentagon letter added: "Considering the difficulties faced and the less

'TANGO' IN ITALY

Jail terms for Brando, Schneider

BOLOGNA (Reuter). — An appeal court here on Monday ordered the seizure of the controversial film "Last Tango in Paris" and sentenced American actor Marlon Brando, and his French co-star Maria Schneider to two months' jail. Also sentenced were the film's Italian director Bernardo Bertolucci, producer Alberto Grimaldi and distributor Ubaldo Mateucci. Each was also fined 30,000 lire (about £2,000). The court had accepted an appeal by the public prosecutor against a previous acquittal of the film on obscenity charges. The film, which features scenes of sodomy and masturbation, was seized on the prosecutor's orders last December as obscene. It was acquitted in February after a much publicised hearing, and reopened to packed houses. Neither Brando or Miss Schneider attended either trial and are both believed to be out of Italy. The defence lawyer said an appeal had been lodged with the Supreme Court.

Israeli expert on TU-144 crash:

SOVIETS WON'T GIVE UP SUPERSONIC LEADERSHIP

By ZEEV SCHUL

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. —

WHATEVER caused the crash of the Soviet supersonic aircraft TU-144 at Le Bourget Sunday, it is unlikely to end continued Soviet attempts to retain their lead in supersonic commercial aviation. This is the view of Professor David Abir, a former head of the Aeronautics Department of the Technion and also a former director of the Israel Air Force's engineering department.

Professor Abir is well acquainted with the Tupolev 144 through his work on the Anglo-French counterpart to the TU-144 — the Concorde. He was the only foreign citizen called in to help iron out structural thermal fatigue problems encountered by the Concorde builders. He spent a year in the Bristol plant as special consultant.

It was then, in 1965, that he obtained his first close view of the TU-144, demonstrated by the Russians for the first time at the Paris air show that year. He remarked then on the similarity between the two aircraft. Prof. Abir said many tended to think "somebody had copied from somebody." He added, "I do not know whether this is true or not. But there are also objective reasons for this similarity."

Prof. Abir pointed out that both projects aimed at good performance at supersonic speeds as well as on landing and take-off. To achieve this the wings had to have a special shape known in aviation slang as the "Ogee," short for ogival delta. Both manufacturers intended to utilize all available knowhow on structures and metals rather than venture into the "unknown" — which would have involved the use of the expensive and relatively little-explored metals like titanium, used by the Americans in their supersonic project.

Both used "conventional" but special aluminum alloys and stretched their application to the utmost limits. Prof. Abir went on to explain that aluminum could withstand stresses of slightly more than mach two (twice the speed of sound). Hence designers on both sides of the Iron Curtain were compelled to use similar structures and technologies in their designs.

Espionage

"Some imitation or industrial espionage was of course always possible. But I personally doubt this was necessary. Both sides had to follow the same lines unless they wanted to bid for higher speeds, like the Americans (Boeing, Lockheed and Douglas), who tried to outperform the Anglo-French in terms of speed (mach three) and passenger capacity (payload)."

"According to some estimates the Americans may have invested as much as $400m. in the gathering of knowhow concerning the use of titanium," Prof. Abir commented.

Prof. Abir recalled the elmination of Lockheed and Douglas from the supersonic transport race, with Boeing taking down its target by a few notches until this company eventually ended up with a 2.7 mach blueprint, including a fixed Ogee type similar to that used by the Concorde as well as the Tupolev designs.

Prof. Abir doubted that the crash of the TU-144 would affect the continued development of supersonic transports on either side of the Iron Curtain. Speaking of the Concorde he said technically it was an "excellent aircraft." Its weak point was its economic viability although he believed this problem to be almost solved, especially since the "second generation" of the aircraft could already carry as many as 130 passengers.

"Almost every new creation in aviation was involved in accidents of one kind or another," Prof. Abir said. He noted that if the Bourget disaster had happened to a Western aircraft, it could have ended the development of the design. But the Russians, he said, "do not build planes because the public wants or needs them. They have reasons of their own."

Illingworth named England captain

RAY Illingworth will captain England in the cricket series against New Zealand starting at Trent Bridge, Nottingham, Thursday. Tony Lewis who led the MCC in their tour to India and Pakistan, after Illingworth declined to go on the tour, has been named vice captain and the selectors are probably grooming him for the captaincy against the West Indies who are due to tour England later this summer.

Two other players who turned down invitations to tour, John Snow and Geoff Boycott are included in the team, whose average age is over 30.

Illingworth has had mixed fortunes as England's captain and although his experience is invaluable, his record cannot be considered by any means great. He has led England in three series since 1971, winning one against Pakistan, losing one against India and drawing one against Australia.

Illingworth will be 41 next week. The team for the test is: Boycott, Amis, Fletcher, Lewis, Roope, Greig, Illingworth, Knott, Gifford, Snow and Arnold.

TENNIS

MARGARET Court, Australian tennis star, beat America's Chris Evert 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 Sunday to win the women's title in the French Open Championships for the fifth time in 12 years.

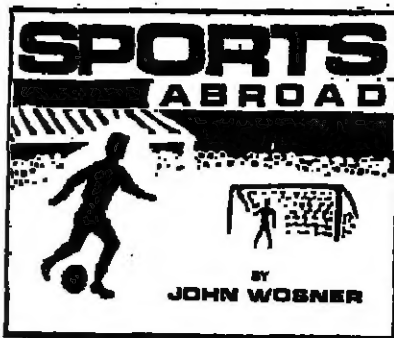

Miss Evert, 18, played brilliantly to win the first set, saving two set points and coming from 2-5 to win the tie-break. But she faded later as the experienced Australian star turned on the pressure.

Mrs. Court, 30, is now two steps along the way to her second grand slam. She has previously won the Australian title and has Wimbledon and Forest Hills still to come. If she does win these two she will be the first woman to win the grand slam twice, having won it in 1970.

GRAND PRIX

SCOTLAND'S Jackie Stewart won the Monte Carlo Grand Prix Sunday and pulled to within four points of reigning world champion Emerson Fittipaldi in the standings for the 1973 world championship.

The race on the City Street Circuit, changed this year for the first time since 1929, pointed up the needle match between the two men who dominate European auto racing this year. Stewart, 36, in two weeks time and brought up on the traditional old style circuits, fouled up the start, but recovered quickly to take the lead on the 8th of 78 laps and was never again headed.

Fittipaldi, 26, and one of the new breed of drivers nurtured on "artificial" faster, broader tracks hung in second spot but could never seriously challenge Stewart.

Stewart Sunday scored his 25th win to equal the all time record set by the late Jim Clark.

There are nine races to go on the Championship trail — the next is in Sweden, June 17 — and most of them are on the new-style tracks which could give Fittipaldi the edge.

METHOD OF THERAPY MAY BE PATENTED

Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a judgment of the District Court delivered on June 1, 1972 (in C.C. 4623/70).

Ltd. is an Israeli pharmaceutical company which produces a variety of drugs, a product known as a remedy for gout.

The Wellcome Foundation is an English company which has been producing a similar remedy for gout for many years.

The District Court found that the product was a pharmaceutical carrier, a patent, registered in Israel.

The Wellcome Foundation sued Ltd. for violation of their patent. The District Court found that the product was a pharmaceutical carrier, a patent, registered in Israel.

The District Court found that the product was a pharmaceutical carrier, a patent, registered in Israel.

The District Court found that the product was a pharmaceutical carrier, a patent, registered in Israel.

After a further study of English and American jurisprudence, Justice Witkon came to the overall conclusion that the modern tendency is towards allowing applications for patents on methods of curing diseases of the human body so as to encourage individuals and companies to undertake the research required in order to discover new methods of using known compositions for the benefit of the public. The rule that patents should not be granted for methods of treating human ailments was, therefore, in his opinion, not a desirable one, and was completely illogical in view of the fact that new pharmaceutical substances or curative devices are patentable, and these are no more likely to be copied than methods of treatment. If, nevertheless, the patentability of methods of treatment is not recognized in England, he continued, it is because of the provisions of section 41 of the Patents Act, 1947, which is applicable to the patent in the present case, does not contain the same restrictions with respect to the grant of compulsory licences as does the English Act, there is no cause, he held, either in law or logic, for regarding a method of medical treatment as unpatentable in Israel, particularly since the invention of a new method of treatment can most certainly not be said to fall outside the field of economic endeavour or to come within the field of "fine art," as opposed to "useful art."

But, Justice Witkon went on to hold, even on the presumption that a patent cannot be granted on a method of treatment of the human body, this rule would not apply in the present case because, first, the method discovered by the respondents consists of a new, hitherto unknown, use of a well-known compound in association with a pharmacologically acceptable carrier; secondly, the inventive step is in the new use, thus eliminating the need for any inventive step in the nature of the pharmaceutical carrier; and thirdly, the respondents' patent could possibly be regarded as a patent for a vendible product and not for a method, and would thus not be subject even to the restrictions contained in section 7 of the new Patents Law of 1967, if this Law had been applicable.

In short, concluded Justice Witkon, he thought that the appellants' argument that the respondents' invention was not patentable because it consisted of a method of therapeutic treatment of the human body should not be allowed and the appeal should be dismissed.

method discovered by the respondents consists of a new, hitherto unknown, use of a well-known compound in association with a pharmacologically acceptable carrier; secondly, the inventive step is in the new use, thus eliminating the need for any inventive step in the nature of the pharmaceutical carrier; and thirdly, the respondents' patent could possibly be regarded as a patent for a vendible product and not for a method, and would thus not be subject even to the restrictions contained in section 7 of the new Patents Law of 1967, if this Law had been applicable.

In short, concluded Justice Witkon, he thought that the appellants' argument that the respondents' invention was not patentable because it consisted of a method of therapeutic treatment of the human body should not be allowed and the appeal should be dismissed.

The first trick

Today's deal from the 1972 Olympiad was between Israel and Brazil. The first trick set the stage.

North
♠ 10 9 8 7
♥ 10 9 8 7
♦ 10 9 8 7
♣ 10 9 8 7

South (D)
♠ A K 10 9 8 4 3
♥ A 7
♦ A 7
♣ A 7

Israel: Friedrich-South, Shaufel-North.

The bidding:
South West North East
2♣ D P 2♠
3♠ P 4♣ All Pass

If you wonder why North passed on the first round, blame it on the opening 2♣ bid which had three possible meanings: an Acol two-bid of eight playing tricks, or a 4-4-1 distribution with 19-24 points, or a weak two suit hand with hearts and a minor. Until North knew more about the hand there was no need to rush into the bidding since West kept the auction open. When South bid clubs freely this confirmed the hand as an Acol opening. Now Shaufel confidently jumped to game. The ♠ 4 was led. Declarer ducked in dummy as did East. Spades were continued and dummy's Ace won. A ♠ was then ruffed to provide a partial elimination. Then tricks were won by the ♣ A and Q and the ♠ 10 allowed to run to the J. After winning the ♣ A the defence was and played. West either had to give a ruff and a shuffle of a losing ♠ through the lead of a ♠, or to lead a ♠ into the A ♣. Thus the contract was made.

Israel: Schwartz-West, Stampf-East.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♣ D P 1♠
1♥ P 4♥ All Pass

In this auction, North also did not raise immediately because here too the nature of the opening bid was uncertain. The opening could have been on a three card suit! Here too South's strong rebid enabled North to comfortably bid game. But the end result was not the same.

The opening lead was also the ♠ Q, and here too the declarer declined to win the first trick. Stampf counted, and I presume that this is what he anticipated: declarer must have two spades and a long ♠ suit; clubs and diamonds must be short suits; and it seemed safest to attack diamonds quickly. Stampf therefore rose with the ♠ K and led a ♠. Since the ♠ finesse was off the contract was set, one trick with the defence winning one ♠, two diamonds and a ♠. This meant a big swing of 720 points or 12 International Match points in Israel's favour. It was the first trick that set the stage.

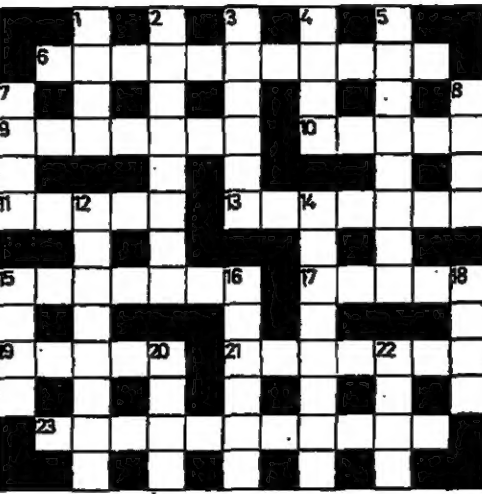

Despite the deal Brazil won this match by 14-5 Victory Points, but overall placed 16th of 35 with Israel placing eighth.

SAPIR WARNS C-o-L payment may in supplementary budget

By Post Staff Writer

Minister Pinhas Sapir warned today that a July payment might make the government's supplementary budget.

In the Knesset to a Gahal's Yoram Eldor, Sapir said that the Finance Minister's average wage rises of 35 percent over the past two years had had an inflationary effect. Other causes of inflation, he said, were the shift in the value of the sheqel and the inflationary trends in most other countries.

As paying more for meat, wool, sugar and most commodities, the Minister said, the government would lose about 2.5 percent on sugar imports.

He stressed, however, that the means of payment had not as sharply in 1973, as in 1972.

Quota for oil from Med to West Europe

By Post Staff Writer

The Absorption Ministry this week announced radical changes in its two loan funds aiding immigrants in establishing their own businesses or offices.

Loan ceilings have been raised, repayment periods extended and new incentives are being offered to immigrants opting for development towns.

Silvan Silvan, head of the Ministry's Economic Services Division, told The Jerusalem Post: "The new terms should prove a boon for newcomers, and we hope it will help encourage western aliyah which, as you know, has fallen off in the past year or so."

The two loan funds are the "Keren Hamashkita" (Investor's Fund) and "Keren Constructivist" (Constructive Fund).

The Investor's Fund, which previously lent IL40,000 to those moving to development towns and IL30,000 to others, now lends IL30,000 and IL20,000 respectively. Interest payments, which are linked to the consumer price index, are nine per cent for development towns and 10 per cent elsewhere. The loan is repayable within 10 years for development areas and eight years elsewhere. (Previously, the loan had to be repaid in seven years.)

The Constructive Fund works as follows: In development towns, a maximum of IL12,000 is available plus an additional IL15,000 of which the immigrant contributes IL2,000.

The five countries account for roughly two to three per cent of Common Market imports of petroleum products.

Bank Leumi provident funds

Bank Leumi's four provident funds have vastly increased in both capital and membership over the past three years, as seen in the fund balance sheets for the period ending March 31.

A total of IL1,012m. was reached in the funds, as compared with last year's IL649m. and IL225m. in 1969.

To date there are about 75,000 members in Otzma, all self-employed and/or professionals, as compared with 39,000 in 1969. The other funds are: Tzur for employees, Kupa Merkazit Le Pitukim for employees and Tzur for farmers — comprise a membership of 30,000.

The funds are managed by Bank Leumi in cooperation with councils chosen by the members.

Elscint sales reach IL23m. in 1972/3

By Post Staff Writer

Elscint, the Elscint scientific instrument company, doubled its sales of IL23m. during the 1972/73 fiscal year. Seventy per cent of its products, which include nuclear medical instruments, were sold abroad, the firm's deputy director, Dr. B. Sabagh, told a meeting of the Hatzit branch of the Public Relations Association yesterday.

Elscint's laptop scanner for medical diagnosis now accounts for nine per cent of the world market, he said.

Prices sharply lower

NEW YORK (AP). — Stock prices were sharply lower yesterday in moderate trading, reflecting continued investor apprehension over the state of the economy, analysts said.

Declining issues held a more than two to one lead over advances. Analysts said the decline, a continuation of last week's sliding prices, were caused in part by the latest, Watergate revelations, which showed a sharp decline in interest rates, and other apparently negative economic factors.

Immigrant business loans raised

By AARON SITTNER

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Absorption Ministry this week announced radical changes in its two loan funds aiding immigrants in establishing their own businesses or offices.

Loan ceilings have been raised, repayment periods extended and new incentives are being offered to immigrants opting for development towns.

Silvan Silvan, head of the Ministry's Economic Services Division, told The Jerusalem Post: "The new terms should prove a boon for newcomers, and we hope it will help encourage western aliyah which, as you know, has fallen off in the past year or so."

The two loan funds are the "Keren Hamashkita" (Investor's Fund) and "Keren Constructivist" (Constructive Fund).

The Investor's Fund, which previously lent IL40,000 to those moving to development towns and IL30,000 to others, now lends IL30,000 and IL20,000 respectively. Interest payments, which are linked to the consumer price index, are nine per cent for development towns and 10 per cent elsewhere. The loan is repayable within 10 years for development areas and eight years elsewhere. (Previously, the loan had to be repaid in seven years.)

The Constructive Fund works as follows: In development towns, a maximum of IL12,000 is available plus an additional IL15,000 of which the immigrant contributes IL2,000.

The five countries account for roughly two to three per cent of Common Market imports of petroleum products.

Elscint sales reach IL23m. in 1972/3

Elscint, the Elscint scientific instrument company, doubled its sales of IL23m. during the 1972/73 fiscal year. Seventy per cent of its products, which include nuclear medical instruments, were sold abroad, the firm's deputy director, Dr. B. Sabagh, told a meeting of the Hatzit branch of the Public Relations Association yesterday.

Elscint's laptop scanner for medical diagnosis now accounts for nine per cent of the world market, he said.

Laromme Hotel to be built in Nahariya

Jerusalem Post Reporter

NAHARIYA. — The cornerstone for a new hotel, to be built by the Laromme chain, was laid on a 21-dunam seashore site yesterday.

The four-storey, 204-room hotel will cost IL28m. and is one of four being built by the chain in Israel. It is planned as an extended-stay hotel, especially for tourists, and will have a heated sea-water pool and health facilities.

The Laromme company of German investors, headed by Ignaz Laromme, is building a total of 1,000 rooms in the country, at an investment of IL270m., of which it is putting up 40 per cent.

America, Israel and oil

ARAB propaganda has been striving busily to establish a strong connection between American policy in the Middle East and the energy crisis. The case being presented is that an anti-Israel American policy would automatically assure the future supply of Arab oil to the United States.

Not unexpectedly, support for this idea came from the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator J.W. Fulbright. In the course of his Committee's hearings on the implications of the energy crisis for America's foreign relations, he suggested it would be best for a solution based on Resolution 242 to be imposed on the Arabs and Israelis alike. The United States would then guarantee the new borders together with the Security Council. Once the Arab-Israeli conflict was finally resolved, the U.S. would be able to relax — and all fear of oil shortages would disappear.

This highly simplified view of the oil situation was challenged by Senator Henry Jackson. He pointed out that the real threat to the oil-producing countries — mainly Iran, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia — comes from other Arab states — Iraq, Syria, Egypt and Yemen — and not from Israel, and that this is the real danger to American oil supplies.

It is no coincidence that the Arab states advocating the use of oil as a political weapon are those who do not possess oil, led by Egypt, which is perennially short of funds. Senator Fulbright chose to ignore the fact that Iraq has been attacking Kuwait, causing continued unrest in the Persian Gulf.

The Iraqi-Soviet treaty, signed in April 1972, stipulates that the parties will cooperate in strengthening their defence capabilities. Even the present policy of detente being pursued by Leonid Brezhnev should not blind America's leaders to the fact that the treaty is entirely valid, and that if Iraq chooses to attack Kuwait, she can expect Soviet help. Israel is no more than a pretext at the present time, and one that would quickly be forgotten if Israel were neutralized in some way, and the countries with no oil, or only a modest amount, would have to seek another pretext for disrupting relations between the great oil exporters and their customers in the West. Senator Jackson has performed a useful service in emphasizing that oil supplies cannot be made more certain by seeking to throw Israel to the wolves. The most likely result of such action would be renewed fighting, with all its possible consequences.

In this connection it is worth while to recall President Nixon's recent Report to the Congress on the U.S. Foreign Policy for the 1970s, in which he said categorically that "stability in the Middle East does not depend only on Arab-Israeli peace and stable relations with and between the great powers." The President added that there are many other factors that contribute to the present unrest in the region — economic competition, ideological conflict, personal rivalries and territorial disputes.

American public opinion will be well advised to take all these factors into consideration so that when gasoline rationing may become necessary this summer, anger and frustration will be directed where it belongs, and not at Israel. Serious questioning of how America is to maintain her present position as a superpower must lead to planning for alternative sources of energy and new sources of oil not subject to Arab pressures and demands.

P.O.W. EXCHANGE

Welcoming the three pilots who returned from Syrian captivity, Dvora (Hizdraf) recalls that there are 10 Israeli prisoners of war in Egypt whom the Egyptian Government has so far refused to exchange. "Just as it does not abandon casualties in the field, the Israel Defence Forces do not abandon its comrades held captive. Not so the Egyptians. This may be the secret of the gap between the I.D.F. and the Arab armies." Al Hanehman (Mapan) reads a certain political significance into yesterday's event, remarking: "It provided proof that the least that could be accomplished by negotiation was an exchange of prisoners and Mr. Eban.

the creation of a more congenial atmosphere."

Elizaveta (non-party) calls for a protest against the maltreatment of the three pilots. "The Syrians treated them not as captive servicemen, but as enemies on whom — according to Syrian concepts — all manner of torture could be exercised freely."

Hamodia (Agudat Yisrael) doubts the chances of Mr. Eban meeting with Habib Bourguiba, as well as the prospect of any settlement emerging from such a meeting. The paper does not credit the Tunisian president with according his own offer the degree of seriousness attached to it by an exchange of prisoners and Mr. Eban.

With Prejudice ! by Alex Berlyne

MAKING MEN OUT OF MONKEYS

THERE was a time when, like all right-thinking boys, I devoured books on cave-men, mammoths, sabre-toothed tigers and the like. I'm pleased to see that the heir to the Berlyne millions, in the full awesome flower of his urbihood, is equally fascinated by dinosaurs, Neanderthal Man and all the messy business of cave-dwelling.

It seems that a lot of people carry this interest over into adult life. Look at the number of times the cave-man theme crops up in "New Yorker" cartoons. For instance. A few years ago when the famous anthropologist, the late L.S.B. Leakey, lectured here on his discovery of human and prehuman remains in the Olduvai Gorge in Tanganyika, he drew record crowds and, incidentally, caused me to drop one of the most embarrassing dangers of my life. A few of us were arguing about his lecture. Were the fragments he described human or were they the fossilized remains of some ape-like creature?

"How can you call them men?" I asked (though taking a far from Fundamentalist position). "They were less than four feet tall and covered with hair." At this, every one stopped arguing and looked at one of our number who is noticeably short of stature and very hairy.

At one time I used to visit the pre-dynastic mummy displayed in the British Museum's Egyptian Galleries. He resided in a glass box and somewhat resembled Sir Alec Douglas-Home, only in a far better state of preservation. Here, in Israel, I commune from time to time with the remains of Carmel Man, discovered by Dorothy Garrod in 1928, who has taken up a recumbent posture in the Rockefeller Museum, doing a sort of arrested breast-stroke. I'd like to know how he kept his teeth in such pristine condition when I am always suffering indignities at the dentist's.

Galilee Man

This country is particularly rich in the remains of our prehistoric ancestors. Ever since Francis Turville Petrie, nattily attired in a cane walking-stick, turned up the bones of Galilee Man in 1925, excavators have been uncovering a wealth of evidence and have pretty well established that this area witnessed the birth of agriculture.

The late Professor Moshe Stekelis did a lot of work on the Galilean culture, including the finding of enormous stone missiles which have been called Ubediya "footballs." This has always reminded me of the bit in Carl Reiner's act about the interview with the "2,000-year-old man" who claims that people communicated in those days by chucking rocks at each other. Later in the routine he says plaintively that he has many thousands of descendants "and not one of them writes to me!"

At one time, the work of Darwin and his school led to a head-on conflict with the religious es-

Anthropologist Richard Leakey holds casts of (top) 2½-million-year old skull found last year near Lake Rudolf, Kenya and a million-year-old Australopithecus skull. The Leakey discovery of a more man-like but older skull was believed to have shattered the theory that homo sapiens is descended from australopithecus. (Dr. Leakey is the son of L.S.B. Leakey, from whom Alex Berlyne learned something about men and apes).

Establishment, both Jewish and non-Jewish. After all, it was the 17th-century Archbishop of Armagh, James Ussher, who exemplified the attitude of the clerics by announcing that the world was created at 9 a.m. on October 23, 4004 B.C.E. Interestingly enough, the Jews adjusted to the turn of events faster than the Gentiles, who were capable of trying a schoolteacher for teaching Darwinism as late as the 'twenties. Despite the efforts of Clarence Darrow, the Great Defender, the Tennessee jury found for Genesis.

The Jewish sages had come to terms with alternatives to the Genesis version of the Creation long ago. Maimonides and Judah Halevi among them. Rabbi A.I. Kook wrote that "the creation is one of the mysteries of the Torah, and if all the statements (in the Bible) are to be taken literally, what mystery is there?"

This sort of flexibility is paralleled in the old joke about the Jew arguing ancestry with an Englishman. "When your forefathers were painting themselves blue all over and living in caves," he declared, "the Jews already had diabetes."

However persuasive the current theories about man and apes being descended from a common ancestor, the whole thing has enormous gaps in the fossil record and is based on an awful lot of conjecture. The books on the subject seem to be peppered with phrases like "it may be assumed" or "it would seem." The trouble seems to be that there are plenty of remains of early anthropoid apes from the Miocene period, some 25 million years ago, but the first unequivocally human fossils date from near the beginning of the Pleistocene (a mere two million years ago) and are fairly well advanced. It would seem that they set up shop on their own in the intervening period, and here the actual evidence is practically non-existent and the conjecture wild and woolly. The theories are so inadequate that you may as well forget the whole thing and get back to the Garden of Eden, where the prose, at least, is immeasurably superior.

The theologian C.S. Lewis once faced a similar predicament. In "The Screwtape Letters" he describes his horror on discovering that one of his students thought of God as a sort of suet pudding. Shred a suet pudding by the fashionable terms used in theology like "God is a Necessarily Existing Being" and the only way she could visualise this was as a sort of amorphous stodge. Lewis sadly concluded that perhaps it was better to think of the Deity as the dignified old gent in a nightie who appears in Renaissance painting.

What happened during the odd 20 million years or so? During the Miocene period we are told, a profusion of types of primitive apes were existing themselves in the mild African climate, living a lotus-eater sort of existence in the rain forests. Then came millions of years of Pliocene drought. A few trapped in the dwindling jungles, emerged afterwards as brachiating apes, swinging about the trees, while many other species were wiped out. With these survivors emerged a surprising creature — Australopithecus — with a remarkably human appearance, using crude pebble tools and walking upright. Robert Ardrey has summed it up neatly: "We entered the crudest of a generalized creature bearing only human potential. We emerged a being lacking only a proper brain and a chin. What happened to us along the way?"

This question has been answered in all sorts of potty ways by a number of people who should know better. One of these apes, it is suggested, left the dwindling forest, saw the plains teaming with wild game, dropped vegetarianism and picked up a weapon instead. The zoologist Desmond Morris has written: "With strong pressure on them to increase their prey-killing prowess, they became more upright — fast, better runners." "Now it is unlikely that any quadruped could make better time on two legs than a monkey, but this doesn't deter the theoreticians. Some have explained this by saying that he couldn't run as fast but he could hold weapons at the same time. The answer to this theory is that even three legs are better than two and in the absence of two-handed swords tying about in the shade

An infant orang-utan sheltered in its mother's arms—does the provide the important keys to evolution? (Came there appears to be little likelihood that this was the reason for adopting an upright gait.

How did he swap his large canine teeth (the apes' natural weapon) for spatulate small teeth (the equivalent of a half-brick)? If you've ever seen the chimps at London Zoo using tools to obtain a reward (and Wolfgang Kohler's research bears this out) you'll realise how limited they are. They can't even use them if they're not in their field of vision. It's difficult to imagine our ancestor fleeing from an enemy and deciding to give the old choppers a rest in preference to a nice handy club that happened to be in his way. Stanley Kubrick envisaged something of the sort in his movie "2001" but he backed it up with some black monoliths, the equivalent of the Tree of Knowledge, which gave the ape the idea.

Fur coats

Then there's all the business of what the fashionable ape-man is wearing this year. Suddenly fur coats are out. This has been explained as a great help during the chase. Who wants to gallop over the hot Savannah lands wearing the equivalent of a mutation mink? whole mystery.

PRAISE FOR ARCHBISHOP RAYA

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I was interested to read the report in your issue of May 25 on the recent article in the New Communist paper "Al Itihad" praising our Greek Catholic Archbishop Joseph Raya. I hope that some day The Jerusalem Post will write its own article of praise for Bishop Raya.

He is a man who really believes his God, and because he believes his God, he believes in love. He believes in brotherhood. He believes in peace. He believes in generosity. He believes in forgiveness. He believes in hope. And he is never afraid. He not only believes, he lives what he believes.

More and more people are learning to love instead of to hate. More and more of us are learning to stand up as Israeli Arabs, proud of our religion, proud of our culture, proud of our country. We are learning that love takes courage, and we are learning to be brave. We are learning that love must include everyone, and we are learning brotherhood and solidarity.

DIPLOMATS' SCHOOL

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I wish to refer to Dr. Moshe Rimon's letter which appeared on May 16 concerning the unidentified boy in the picture illustrating an article on the School for Diplomats (May 6). My son, Uriel, confirms that this is indeed Yuval Fagalia whom he met at Kibbutz Gonen. Yuval has changed his family name to Nofar and is still living at Gonen.

ANTIDOTE TO ANTI-SEMITISM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — I agree with Rev. Duverney that every honest "new Jew" is as much (if not more) a Zionist as the "old Jew," because "Zion" is the be-all and end-all of the teachings of the Holy Scriptures.

To believe Emmanuel (Jesus) is to believe in Zion and Zionism. Rev. Duverney pointed out. Churchill stated publicly that he had been a Zionist all his life. Lord Balfour and my compatriot David Lloyd George were the architects of the Balfour Declaration because of their complete identification with Zion of the Bible, the root of Zionism.

As it is evident that anti-Jewish, anti-Semitic and anti-Zionist poison is still being administered over much of the world, it is the solemn duty of every genuine Zionist to apply the whole range of antidotes to extract the venom. It must be stressed daily that Emmanuel-Jesus was a Jew, his mother a Jewess, his father a Jew and all his 12 disciples Jews.

Only by this candid approach to anti-Semitism and anti-Zionism can another catastrophe be avoided.

TRIBUTE TO POLICE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — As a visitor to Israel, I feel I must write to you to express my admiration at the wonderful job performed by the police in Jerusalem on Independence Day.

The parade itself did not surprise me, as by now one has come to expect a very high standard from the Defence Forces. But I left Tel Aviv and was in my seat within an hour and a half, with the bus parked two minutes from my seat. At the end of the parade, I was back in my house within 90 minutes. To move 10 per cent of the population with such ease shows staff work of the highest order.

To all on duty, from the highest to the man directing traffic, I would like to say "thank you."

SOUTH AFRICAN JEWISH POETS

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post
Sir, — In his review of Chaim Lewis' "Shadows in the Sun" (your magazine of April 13), Professor Lipman wrote that South African Jewry had at last produced its first poet of distinction.

Without derogating in any way from the work of Chaim Lewis, it is to be doubted whether this statement is correct.
Sydney Clouts and Peter Elias (formerly Dr. Friedman), winners of the Olive Schreiner Prize for English Poetry, must surely be classified as poets of distinction. And if one is allowed to consider Afrikaans poetry, Olga Kirsh (now Mrs. GERS of Rehovot) cannot possibly be overlooked. Another who merits consideration is the late Thelma Tyfield, a collection of whose poems (in English) under the title of "Time Friezed" has recently been published.
